After School Programme receives new Laptop Computers

Cayman National recently donated 2 new Lenovo Notebook Laptops to St. George's Anglican Church after school programme PIN. Positive Intervention Now (PIN) is an afterschool intervention programme for at-risk adolescents in central George Town. The programme which was developed by the Education and Youth Committee of the St. George's Anglican Church is now in its second year, and runs three afternoons per week.

A core objective of the PIN Programme is that each child receives maximum instruction and guidance in a nurturing, creative environment and to assist their parents/guardians in providing the necessary parental support.

Chairman of the Board of Directors for the PIN programme, Pat Bynoe-Clarke, says, "We are grateful to the Cayman National for the donation of computers to the PIN programme. Our children will benefit significantly as they will be able to conduct research and enhance their learning via the educational sites which we have identified for them to access."

"Investing in the development of our children and youth is fundamental and Cayman National is indeed pleased to have an opportunity to make this investment through this programme", said Claudia Welds, Senior Executive Corporate Communications.
